Incendiary Fire. We regret to learn that on Tuesday last Mr. R. J. Nixon of Grant township, Pender county, met with the misfortune of having destroyed by fire his barn and stables, valued at $3,000. The barn at the time it was consumed contained about 100 barrels of corn,600 bushels peas, harness and farming implements, all of which were consumed. In the stable at the time the fire was discovered were three fine and valuable horses, one of which was burned moved from the building, were badly burned. NUMBER 4

HON. GEORGE DAVIS

It is not too much to say that among iving North Carolinians this gentleman is one of the most gifted and distingnished. He is not so well known in this section of the State as his unquestioned abilities and high reputation at home deserve. I regret that my information concerning him is so limited. I have never had the pleasure of meeting him. Indeed, I have never been fortunate enough even to see "a counterfeit presentiment" of him, and caunot, therefore, tell you what manknown him as an accomplished gentle. who were not implicated in the paylawyer of high reputation, as a political speaker of remarkable attractiveness and force, and as a writer of un-

Mr. Davis is fifty seven, which is two years older than I supposed when these chars began. A gifted lady, a common friend of Mr. Davis and myself, in a recent letter in which she refers to him, says -- "He is a Christian, As the young culprit was returning a scholar and a gentleman." He is a rom the scene of devastation which s a younger brother of the late Bishop Carolina, but are natives of this State. Bishop Davis was a gentleman of fine talents, and better still, of sincere, earnest, simple piety. Mr. Davis has never, I believe, mingled much in political life. He has office. His occasional speeches on the hustings attracted large crowds and were signalized with much effect, being gone to Whiteville in at endance on distinguished for exalted sentiment tion. Such is the opinion I have formed from reading the accounts of his campaign efforts that have appeared in the public prints. He was a member also called by Bresident Davis to fill the office of Attorney General whilst he government was at Richmond, Va. It was a merited tribute to his high personal worth, and to his attainments and ability as a lawyer.

I do not know that he has published anything but an occasional paper upon points of law, and a literary aldress which was delivered at the University Whiteville. He has confessed his crime | was. In common with hundreds who have read that address, I admired it very much. It is the production of a graceful, cultivated and discriminating ntellect. His sketches of the leading spirits who figured in the Cape Feat section in the troublous days of the War of Independence are exceedingly graphic, spirited and eloquent, and possess more than a transient interest. They excite a desire in his readers for other productions of a similar character from his peu, and a regret that one who writes so well has not written more. I read those sketch-s some years ago, and they impressed me as the best contributions of their kind to our sparse native literature. It occurs to me that Mr. Davis is ability, the literary skill, and the logical cult of settlement. training necessary. Besides, he has that appreciation of and devotion to North Carolina which are so essential in the preparing of a work in which our past as a people enters. With his intellectual powers of lusty prime; with the experience, repose, and assured strength which age only gives, and with that fund of general information and accurate learning which prolonged study alone can gather, it appears to me that he could write some work connected with North Caroling that would be an ornament to his mother and a
